IN THE POLICE COURT

PROMPTLY. Twenty-Two Persons Pass in Review-

The Judge Comments on Events of the Day.

FOURTH OF JULY PARADE MOVED

The Fourth of July parade in the Police Court started to move promptly at 8:30 o'clock, twenty-two persons passing in review before Judge Kimball. There was no martial music to assist the paraders in keeping step, except the vocal noise made by Clerk "Lum" Harper, who arraigned the offenders, and the "Step lively, please," of Bailiff Hughes, who occupied a position near the entrance of the dock. Some of those who passed in review of the court were released, while others were sent to the workhouse or jail in default of Richard Queen, an under-sized colored youth, admitted his guilt when called on to explain why he had a loaded revolver in his possession last night.

"I found him asleep near Twining City last night," Policeman Price told the court, "but he did not wake up when I called him. "How did you get him awake?" the officer was asked. "I shook him, and in doing so I struck my hand against a loaded revolver in his hip pocket. "I went down into the country vesterday to visit some friends and brought the revolver back to use in case I was held up,

Queen told the court. "Can't excuse you," his honor said.
"Fifty dollars or thirty days."

Harry Nelson's Exploit.

Harry Nelson, colored, was in the dock because he exploited a number of firecrackers yesterday. It was explained to Judge Kimball that Nelson threw some lighted firecrackers at Sarah Reuben, who conducts a small store near Washington circle, and when the woman's husband remonstrated with him for his actions Nelson made use of vile language.
"I didn't do a thing," Nelson declared.

"From the evidence I think you did a great deal." Judge Kimball told him. "But I didn't," was the answer.
"Twenty-five dollars or four months,"

the court said in concluding. "Not guilty," was the answer made by Isaac Johnson, colored, who was in the toils on a charge of disorderly conduct. "What did he do?" Policeman Walker

"Drunk and asleep on the car track near the corner of 1st and B streets northeast last night," the officer replied.
"Did he do anything else?" his honor inquired

"Got mad and cursed me because I disturbed his slumbers," was the answer.
"I was not drunk and neither was I asleep, but was just resting near the car track," Isaac explained. "Guess the officer's right," the court told the man.

"What's the fine?" he asked. "Ten dollars or thirty days," was the re-ply from Judge Kimball. Friends who we e in court supplied the necessary cash, and Isaac was released from custody.

Premature Celebration. James Scruggs, a young man who resides in South Washington, was convicted on a charge of discharging firecrackers on 41/2 street last night, and was given the alternative of paying a tax of $3 or spending nine days on the farm in default. Mortimer Luddam and Hugh L. Lorain, two young men who reside near Washington Circle, did not go home, but instead spent the night in charge of the police, having been taken into custody by Policeman Taggert near the corner of 9th and D streets northwest.

They pleaded guilty when arraigned before Judge Kimball on a charge of violating the police regulations. After hearing the facts Judge Kimball lectured the young men and imposed a fine of $10 on each, with thirty days in the workhouse. They were without cash and friends were notified of their arrest.

Considerable amusement was created in court when John Wood a colored resident.

ourt when John Wood, a colored resident of Marion court, was called to the bar of justice. It was reported that Wood occupied a good deal of time in chasing his wife with an ax last night.

Totally Deaf.

When he was called on to make an explanation it developed that Wood was totally devoid of hearing and could not read or write.

decided against Wood and levied an assessment of $5, with fifteen days on the farm as the equivalent. Fred Newman, colored, was taxed $5, with half a month on the farm in default, for using profanity in the presence of Police-man Lucas, in Southeast Washington, last The procession ended at 10 o'clock, and Judge Kimball and the attaches were en-abled to enjoy the remainder of the holiday as private citizens.

The Fireworks Squad.

A number of people fell into the clutches of the police during yesterday and last night for prematurely celebrating with fireworks. The majority left collateral at the station houses, which they forfeited by their non-appearance in the Police Court this morning. Several, however, appeared for trial and their conviction followed with the imposition of a fine. Twenty-three young-sters under the age of sixteen years were taken into custody for setting of firecrack-ers and other explosives. Those cases were not called in court today, but will be heard in the Juvenile Court Monday afternoon. Maj. Sylvester's order to the policemen in regard to the use of fireworks last night was strictly enforced by his men and the was unusually quiet as compared with former years.

John Burverries, who conducts a store on 1st street northwest, and William Patchett, proprietor of a place of business on 41/2 street southwest, appeared in court on a charge of selling fireworks to minors. was convicted and the former paid a fine Patchett was taxed twice that which he paid. John F. Richter forfeited $3 security on a charge of a similar character. Ernest Jarbce, who is about twenty-eight years of age, was in company with a young lady last night, it was stated, and she lighted a firecracker and gave it to him to Mr. Jarboe paid a fine of $3. Joseph Healy and Samuel Boswell each paid a fine of $5 and Samuel Fosgo paid $2 for similar offenses.
